Figure S4  Screenshot from the IGV showing a candidate mutation associated with a misaligned polymorphic insertion. The T→G candidate mutation can be resolved by supposing that reads carrying the G allele have instead a TTTG insertion (shown as the vertical purple symbol), which is also present in reads of other individuals (including one parent) in addition to the two individuals shown.